Visitors to London this summer should splash out and stay at one of the five newly renovated suites at 51 Buckingham Gate in St James' Park.

After a £1.2 million refurbishment, overseen by London-based designer Sue Freeman and art by Anna McNeil, 51 Buckingham Gate, Taj Suites & Residences has launched five new suites. The hotel's aim was to make guests feel like they are at home – with all the mod cons, incredible views across the secluded courtyard and a feeling of tranquillity amid city life.

While two of the suites are a huge 1,800 square feet with three spacious bedrooms and bathrooms, a kitchen, living and dining room, the other three cater for guests who need one or two bedroom accommodation.

If you really want to move in, the hotel offers the opportunity to create The Presidential Floor, this means converting two full floors into a private space, so you can book nine bedrooms at once and really feel like you have a house within a hotel.
